Emergency Medical Service Staff Trains the Department of Public Works

A heart attack can strike at any time, and Enfield residents just became a little safer in that event. Our Enfield EMS staff, who are CPR and Advanced Cardiac Life Support Instructors, trained approximately 100 Department of Public Works (DPW) employees in administering Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) and the use of Automatic External Defibrillators (AED).

As a result of these efforts, an additional 100 first responders have been put into the community. With DPW employees working on projects all over Enfield, there is a real possibility that one of them could be the first on scene in an emergency. These Town employees are now equipped with the proper training for that initial response until EMS arrives to manage the patient. Citizens of Enfield should be proud of the initiative that DPW has taken. Not only have the employees of DPW been trained, but a number of AEDs have been placed strategically in town. With AEDs more readily available, the probability of survival of a heart attack increases significantly.

During the past few months Enfield EMS care providers have continued to develop and hone their emergency skills through participation in continuing medical education. This includes access to high tech patient simulation labs. They have been recognized for excellence in pre-hospital cardiac care.

Gary Wiemokly is the Director of EMS
